Early Engagement with Business Students in FYE Seminars

Amanda Kraft, MSLIS
Research & Instruction Librarian

What's an FYE seminar?

First-Year Experience (FYE) at the College

"A First-Year Seminar (FYSE) is an academic course (3 credit hours) that explores special topics taught by outstanding faculty."

Examples: Apocalypse to Warp Drive: Physics in Film, Beyond the Grave: What Old Cemeteries Tell and Teach the Living, Harry Potter and the Human Condition, Healthy Minds and Healthy Bodies, Swimming in Plastic Soup, etc.

First-Year Experience (FYE) at the College

"Learning Communities (LC) link two academic courses (6-8 credit hours). Faculty teaching these courses work together to establish joint activities and common curriculum themes designed to explore the ways in which subjects are interrelated."

Examples: Beyond the Surface: Writing about the Stage, Street, and Self, Feminist Jiu-Jitsu for Self-Defense, From Russia with Code: Cybersecurity and Russian, Learning from the Environment with Data and Geoinformation, etc.

"All FYE courses have an attached Synthesis Seminar (FYSS). FYSS courses are not academic and are discussion based so students get the most out of the experience."

Business-Focused FYE at the College

- Intelligent Investor
 - Finance
- Planes, Trains, and Automobiles: More Than Just a Movie
 - Supply Chain Management
- Technology, Innovation, and Sustainability
 - o Business and Computer Science
- The Wonderful World of Real Estate According to King Street
 - Finance and Real Estate (in addition to business, law, historic preservation, public policy, politics, urban studies, environmental sciences, and arts management)

How do you do library instruction?

Intelligent Investor

- Two (2) short visits to FYSS 101
 - Searching the Classic Catalog and Discovery Service
 - Company research via business databases and searching for individual journals
- Research assignments in the FYSE course:
 - Blog post on a defunct company
 - Research paper on why the company failed

Planes, Trains, and Automobiles

- One (1) short visit to FYSE course
 - Getting help with research (specifically, making an appointment with a librarian)
 - Searching the Classic Catalog and Discovery Service
 - Supply chain research via business databases and searching for individual journals
- In this case, there were no research assignments.

Technology, Innovation, and Sustainability

- No class visits required. (He was very well-versed in library resources.)
- In this case, there were no research assignments, and the professor was more interested in working with me on a guide.

Not all faculty members are interested in closely collaborating with the librarian assigned to them.

The Wonderful World of Real Estate

- One (1) long visit to FYSE course
 - Getting help with research (specifically, making an appointment with a librarian)
 - Searching the Classic Catalog and Discovery Service
 - Real estate research via business databases and searching for individual journals
- Research assignment in the FYSE course:
 - Urban plan for a hand-selected property in Charleston

How is this beneficial?

Future School of Business students get experience with business resources in their first year, and they know where to go for help.

Questions? Suggestions?